THE POWERS TRIAL.

The evidence in the Powers case closed yesterday and the jury was then taken to the scene of the killing. V. Bradley, Golden, Hendrick, Campbell and Franklin will speak for the Commonwealth and Sims, Denny, Tinsley, Owens and Brown for defense in order named. The judge announced that Youtsey's trial would begin as soon as Powers' is over. The following is the evidence since our last issue:

Mrs. John Davis said Powers was at her home sick Jan. 25 all day after between 10 and 11.

Judge Wilder, of Corbin, said Noaks told him he knew nothing of the conspiracy to kill Goebel and also thought Powers innocent as a lamb.

Georgetown operator said Noaks telegraphed to Indiana July 26 to Miss Blankenship to return his letters quick.

W. R. Day, ex-treasurer, heard Powers on Jan. 29 talking to mail officer of the L. & N. about transportation. Heard Taylor say he wanted a Western Kentucky crowd. Went to Louisville lille with Powers the day Goebel was killed. Told the same tale as Powers about trip. He was told by Youtsey shortly before the assassination that the contest could be settled for $300. Youtsey didn't say how, but his manner showed something was wrong and the witness left him. Two letters were produced which Day admitted he wrote to C. B. Hill March 28 and April 1, in which he almost says that Youtsey is the assassin. He tells Hill to tell Commonwealth's attorney to have him summoned. Saw Youtsey on the day of the Van Meter contest with a gun at the window of the room between Powers' and the governor's office. Window was raised and blind half down. Witness spoke to Todd, who made Youtsey move. This was before the $300 proposition was made. Defense here rested on chief, having introduced 61 witnesses against 74 for the Commonwealth. The failure of Yost and Bradley to appear as witnesses according to promise, caused much comment.

Rev. John Stamper was then introduced by Commonwealth with the view of contradicting him. He denied that he said to certain persons that everything Golden said was true, but admitted he said he believed a great portion of it. Admitted he told J. C. Cantril

Everything Golden said was true. Henry Bazelwood and J. B. Watkins heard James Sparks say Goebel was never to be governor, that he would be killed and Taylor would pardon the assassin and that the pardons were all ready made out except names. This was on Wednesday before the shooting. Sparks denied saying this.

Z. T. Lusby, a Georgetown policeman, heard Stamper say he believed everything Golden said and was in sympathy with the prosecution.

W. L. Jett saw Miles arrest Whittaker and denied that he made threats to occupants of building.

W. F. Grayant, assistant auditor, said only $5,000 of reward fund has been used. Culton was paid his salary December and January. This contradicts Stone.

Jailer Pflanz, of Louisville, said S. I. Stone complained that Culton was not receiving proper treatment and that he was a good fellow of fine family and could be trusted anywhere.

Three witnesses contradicted Barber. Barkerload, of Barboursville, about Wharton Golden saying he was in the $100,000 reward and exhibiting a roll of bills.

A. L. Reid and Z. Settle contradicted Attorney Sparks materially.

Six Frankfort merchants whose stores are opposite the Capitol, saw no evidence of a mob after the shooting. No attempt to attack the building and no need of troops.

Julian Kuylen of the Frankfort

Julian Kersey, of the Franklin militia, said State troops were placed on war footing before the election. Sheriff Suter said Collier offered to place troops at his disposal provided Collier remained boss. Offer refused because they were not needed.

The statement that democrats were ready for a fray with arms and ammunition was disproved by several.

Ass't Librarian Kavanaugh and Sergeant-at-Arms Haley saw Powers on Capitol grounds between 4 and 5 p. m. Jan. 25 in close conversation with Chas. Finley and Wharton Golden. This is the day Noaks claims he heard him conspire. Powers previously swore that he was sick in bed all that day.

S. A. Petticoard said Attorney Sinclair had said that the shot sounded like it came from the office of the secretary of State. Sinclair said he did not say it.

J. W. Daugherty, Gen. Breckinridge's colored porter, contradicted John Perkins, Collier's porter. Perkins had told him he did not carry an order to the arsenal calling out the militia and that he would not swear it.

Robt Noaks offered to read his let-

A train ran into an omnibus at Station, Pa., killing 11 people and wounding many more.

IN OLD VIRGINIA.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 11.—To one who remembers how this city looked when being looted and most of it burned by the "Yankee" army just before the surrender of Lee and his starving and ragged remnants of heroes, its present appearance is as gratifying as its recuperation has been wonderful. In fact the city of 1900 very little resembles that of 1865. Splendid buildings have been erected in the places of those burned and the city has spread to the west till what were farming lands then, now present beautiful homes and substantial business houses. No city in the South has finer private residences and grounds and none gives greater evidence of thrift and prosperity. The Capitol Square, as the beautiful grounds enclosing the Capitol, executive mansions and other State buildings is called, is a charming park of many acres and is kept in perfect condition by the convicts from the penitentiary located in the city. The Capitol building is not near so imposing as the magnificent new city hall, but its historic connections make it one of the most interesting buildings in the world. It was built in colonial times and besides being the seat of the State government, was the Capitol of the Confederate States. It is filled with ancient and historic documents, paintings and statues, together with many relics of the revolutionary and other wars. Days could be interestingly spent in examination of the almost numberless articles of historic nature, and a description of them would fill many volumes. On a large sheet appears a declaration of the demands and intentions of the Confederate Congress, to which, with those of the other members, the well-known signature of Kentucky's distinguished attorney general is attached. It may be a fac simile of the original paper, but it looks like the original and if Robt. J. Breckinridge didn't sign the document, the lithographer has gotten his signature so perfect that it is genuine or copied. The square contains numerous statues, besides a large monument surmounting which is an equestrian statue of George Washington and around which on pedestals appear in bronze the immortal Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and other distinguished sons of the mother of Statesmen and presidents. A fine life size statue of Henry Clay, in marble, of Stonewall Jackson, in bronze, and others are distributed at intervals over the square, which even in this parched and dried up season retains most of its vernal beauty and invitingness.

The greatest improvement of the many great ones notable on every hand, is "The Jefferson," by far the best hotel in the South. It occupies an entire block, extending from Franklin to Main Streets, and is as magnificent of exterior as it is palatial of interior. It has rooms for over 600, a hall capable of seating over 1,000 and a court in the center filled with rare flowers and exotic plants whose beauty and fragrance are rivaled only by the superbness of the surroundings. A very large statue of Thomas Jefferson, the father of democracy, is in the center of the court and accounts for the name of the hotel. The building and grounds represent an outlay of $1,500,000 and judging from the charges the proprietor tries to get his money back from each guest. But the fare and accommodations are worth a small fortune.

There are many things in which Richmond takes the lead. For one she is the largest manufactured tobacco market in the world. The amount invested in the business is stated at about three millions with annual sales of ten millions. The only locomotive making establishment in the South is here and does a very extensive business. More paper boxes are made here than in all the country combined, while ship building has recently become an important industry. The city is at the head of tidewater and the falls here being much more pronounced than those at Louisville furnish a power that has been harnessed to run the many manufacturing for which it is noted. The capital of the glorious Old Dominion has a glorious past, which will only be excelled by its future greatness.

Since I have been in Virginia, I have almost lost the run of political and other affairs. The Richmond papers contain little of interest to a Kentuckian, in fact very little of general interest. In the matter of newspapers, the city has not kept pace with other cities of its size or with other enterprises. As important as we Kentuckians think the Powers trial, the matter is dismissed with sometimes not over a "stick full," while some of the papers ignore it altogether. I do not believe Virginians read newspapers as much as Kentuckians do. At least, I am sure that if there was greater demand for newspapers, there would be better ones here. New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington papers are in Richmond by 9 A. M. and their facilities for news being so much greater, their circulation also militates against the Richmond papers. The New York World runs a special train to carry its papers and other metropolitan dailies are almost as enterprising.

I have heard very little of general politics here, except now and then to hear the admirable acceptance speech of Bryan at Indianapolis favorably commented upon. The average unthinking man, who ascribes every good thing to the result of McKinley's "wise" administration, is having his credulous confidence rudely shaken by the prevailing and destroying drought. They think that he oughtn't to be allowed the earth to be parched as it is being nor the crops ruined as they are, and will cease to sing paeans of praise to him for blessings which the good Lord alone has vouchsafed. They are beginning too to realize that much of the boasted prosperity of the country at large is imaginary and confined mostly to the favored few of the corporations, trusts and combines, and that it is the masses and not the masses that are feeling the wave of so-called prosperity supposed to be sweeping the land by order of High Priest Hanna. I hear some people, who ought to know better, say that McKinley has made a model executive and that they will vote to continue him in power, but most, if not all of the better class of voters, are for Bryan, who is as certain of Virginia's electoral vote, as death and taxes are inevitable.

The questions now agitating the people are the ones to be considered by the constitutional convention that the voters have decided shall be held. The main one is how to overcome the growing power of the Negro vote. An educational qualification is likely to be adopted, with the provision that no voter in 1861 or his descendants shall be disfranchised. A similar law has been adopted by a tremendous popular majority in North Carolina, which has greatly encouraged the promoters of the scheme for a white man's government. Another reform is to show itself in the judiciary. It takes a fortune now to go to law, the court costs in many cases amounting to a denial of justice. I had a little experience in the line and had to pay over $100 costs in a case originally involving only $300. The Virginians are treading on dangerous ground though, when they go after constitutional conventions. They don't always do the right thing or the things expected of them as Kentucky knows and feels to her sorrow.

One of the most delightful of the many delightful experiences of this very pleasant outing was a short visit to my birthplace at Louisa. It had been years since I had stopped there before, but the changes in the looks of the place were not as marked as the appearance of the people, most of whose faces were either new or forgotten. An only aunt and the last of a large family on my paternal side lives there and although the snows of 75 winters have fallen on her devoted head, she retains her youth and buoyant spirits to a remarkable degree. She has grown old gracefully and with loving children to see that her last days are free from care or unsatisfied desire, she peacefully and philosophically awaits the time when she will join the loved ones on the other shore, which for the sake of the loved ones here I hope may be long delayed. The open hearted welcome I received at her home and the unmistakable gladness that shone in each eye of the family on my coming made me feel indeed and in truth that it was good to be there. I shall never forget the pleasure of the hours that sped all too fast in this charming home circle.

At Louisa I had the honor of meeting Editor James E. Bibb, of the News. Besides being a most affable and pleasant gentleman, he is a fine writer and an inventor. He has nearly perfected a type setting machine that will discount the Mergenthaler and make newspaper making a pleasant pastime, as with it a man can sit in his parlor and get all his matter in shape for printing almost without effort and with the greatest dispatch.

Most Stanford people will remember "Little Willie Walton from Virginia," who used to be an attaché of the INTERIOR JOURNAL. They wouldn't know him now, however. He is 6 feet 3, weighs 220 pounds and the name of W. B. Walton flies at its mast head as editor and proprietor of the Hanover Herald, a prosperous and well edited newspaper. He is married too and three good looking children now hang about his knee and call him "papa."

Except for the excessive heat and the terrific drought which has put a blight on all vegetation, thereby destroying the pleasing effects of many pretty landscapes and romantic places, my visit has been all that heart could wish. Everything has been done to add to our comfort and pleasure and many things have occurred to make our stay one that will only fade when memory itself is no more. We have spent most of our time in the cozy residential city of Ashland, whose houses are almost hid in the thick groves and vine-embowered surroundings in which they nestle. It looks much more like a summer resort than a business centre. There are scarcely half a dozen stores in town, the residents buying their supplies principally in Richmond, only 16 miles distant, and with which communication is had by 20 trains a day. Most of the men living there do business in Richmond, the railroad company by selling an annual ticket for $50, good to go and return as often a day as the holder wishes, making it cheaper for them to go so. Randolph Macon College, the largest Methodist school in the South, is located here, but the buildings are not very imposing. Within a few miles is the birthplace of Henry Clay and nearby the mill that he used to go to when a barefooted boy, which circumstances gave him the name of "The Mill Boy of the Slashes." The town is named in honor of his residence. Patrick Henry's home is not far distant and in Old Hanover C. H., seven miles away, he made some of the speeches that gave him fame, if indeed his famous "Give me liberty or give me death" was not said there. Many glorious memories cluster around the name of the county, but it is to the dearer ones that my mind is now directed. It was the home of my parents, who have for long years, slept beneath its sod and where I grew to manhood amid the fond surroundings of everything that contributed to a sweet old home, recollections of which grow brighter and stronger as the years go by. It is there that my only sister has her summer home and where for a week I have enjoyed its comforts and her good cheer and that of her boys, now some of them almost grown to manhood. A dear old maternal aunt lives there also and with the numerous cousins and old friends the hours have flown all too fast. It has been the most restful week I have enjoyed for years and has almost made me forget the trials and tribulations that beset a rural newspaper maker and unless they be recalled I will cease to scribble for the present for the "cheapest and best." W. P. W.

WE are again constrained to express the desire that there will be a long, strong and unanimous pull to either repeal or so modify the present election law as to cause it to meet with the approval of all fair-minded people. Every law in a government of the people by the people ought, if possible, to stand this test. While the present law is not one thousandth part as bad as represented, yet it is a stumbling-block in the paths of many good men who, without examining for themselves, have been misled by the misrepresentations and vilifications heaped upon it, into considering it a hydra-headed monster. Laws are perfected exactly like all other human creations. The inventive genius after thorough study constructs a machine as nearly perfect as he can for certain work, yet he never considers it completed until he has seen it in practical operation. He can then tell by observation whether or not it is a success; and if not, the defects are apparent and he endeavors to correct them. Kentucky never produced a man better fitted by nature, training, and experience than William Goebel for drafting a perfect law. The present law, whether or not it was his production, was at least fathered and sent forth by him as being in his opinion as nearly perfect as possible. This opinion was shared by numerous others. Its object was to prevent frauds in elections. Goebel had but little opportunity to observe its operation, as his career was cut short by an assassin's bullet. All will agree that in the tests given the law, frauds were not prevented. Goebel was no part of a moss-back, but was progressive in every particular. Had he lived he would have attempted at the first opportunity to either discard or to amend the law in all particulars in which it failed to accomplish that for which it was enacted. The last thing on earth that he would have desired would have been the reputation of anything on account of his memory, which was capable of improvement and which was liable to create dissensions in his party's ranks. On the contrary he would have those left behind to continue the work where he left off, to be loyal and true to the great common people, by seeing that such a law was finally enacted as would insure the counting of their votes. The law was from the first opposed by a large and respectable element of the party whose dissatisfaction has increased since seeing it in practical operation. But the opponents of Goebel and the opponents of the Goebel law by no means compose the same class. Some of the law's bitterest opponents were his staunchest friends. We want harmony and want it now above all things. It would be a great mistake to keep up the old fight in the party ranks with the law as the bone of contention. All that anybody can ask is a fair and just law, one that will correctly ascertain the will of the people. How much better it would be for those who still have an abiding faith in the present law to compromise on one satisfactory to everybody, to show the conciliatory spirit of the Apostle Paul, when he said: If eating meat causes my brother to offend, then will I eat no meat. Moreover it is a maxim in military tactics to ascertain, if possible, what the enemy desires, then do the opposite. It is well known that the enemy is violently opposed to the law being touched. It is their chief stock in trade for the campaign. Remove it and they are undone; their thunder is stolen. We will then have to encounter only a toothless viper. A great deal of blowing and hissing will be done, but no biting. The election of governor will be assured and it may save us the presidency. Notwithstanding their air of self-confidence, the republicans realize that they are in the fight of their lives. Four years ago it required a colossal corruption fund and the untiring efforts of their shrewdest tricksters to defeat a comparatively unknown and headless youth. That youth today is in the full stature of manhood, the 1-carnation of honor, an intellectual giant, the idol of the American people, raised up by the Almighty to drive the money changers from the Temple. The enemy is even now quaking for fear of the effects of his blows when with eloquent tongue he impeaches them of high crimes and misdemeanors—for the army scoundrels, the stealing in Cuba, the fostering of trusts, the squandering of public funds and so ad infinitum. The vote of Kentucky may turn the balance, and no better pretext than the Goebel law will be wanted to throw it out. The Tilden and Hayes outrage is fresh in our minds, and history is fond of repetition.

THE London Echo is tickled to death because "that conservative democratic newspaper, the Danville Advocate," has not put up the names of Bryan, Stevenson and Beckham at its head. Brer. Dyche should remember that large bodies move slowly and that the election is a long time off. Of course the Advocate will support democratic nominees; all democratic newspapers do.

A LETTER written by Senator Morgan, of Alabama, to a friend in 1852 has been discovered and published, in which he says he never knew of a man getting in trouble who took his wife's advice. But we will guarantee that the old gentleman never knew of a man who didn't get into serious trouble when he refused to take his wife's advice.

LOUISVILLE is rejoicing over its great increase of population as shown by the census returns and Cincinnati mourning over the smallness of its increase. The latter city will soon be known as a Covington suburb, if it doesn't spread itself.

If Powers' trial lasts much longer, Owens' fines for contempt of court will consume his fee, but if the public's contempt for Owens could be assessed in money and collected, it would consume his entire estate.

A NEW YORK girl has sued a firm of millers for damages for passing a likeness of her face as an advertisement on flour barrels. She would probably compromise for some extra white flour to paste on her face.

A YOUTH was recently fined one cent in a neighboring court for committing an assault and battery on his exasperated aunt. He is now doubtless reconciled, for any body can stand a one cent aunt.

HANG the assassins on the hackberry tree.

MT. VERNON.

Workmen are making good progress on the various new buildings.

Reader, how many tree frogs have you seen during your existence?

Mrs. Thomas Bowman died at an advanced age in Skaggs Valley Sunday. The telephone poles for the line between Wildie, Orlando and Mt. Vernon are all set.

The band boys leave Wednesday to play three days for the G. A. R. reunion at Woodstock.

John Carter, a telegraph lineman, while trimming out brush Monday on the Wildie line, cut himself severely above the knee.

The old brick hotel will have its first floor changed into two store-rooms. Work will begin as soon as S. W. Davis vacates for his new house.

William H. Colyer, one of Brodhead's best citizens, died Sunday night after a long illness of consumption. The burial was conducted by the Masonic fraternity.

The trouble between two stone companies at Langford seems to be settled, at least both companies are going ahead with work in spite of an injunction gotten out by one of the companies.

Judge Williams is yet at Mallory Springs and we are glad to say, is improving in health and Rockcastle county throughout, earnestly desires the early restoration to health of her noble defender of the people's rights.

If the band boys would refrain from playing so much on Sunday, especially during services at the churches it would make a better impression upon visiting strangers and cause home folks to feel that the boys are all right, but have been somewhat thoughtless.

Miss Delora Brown, of Texas, who has had a delightful visit of several weeks with relatives in the Level Green neighborhood, is with Mrs. G. B. Lawrence. Miss Callie Adams, who made many friends while here in the spring, is visiting her cousin, Miss Ida May Adams.

Mrs. Willis Adams and daughter, Miss Ida May, were in Crab Orchard last week. Miss Mollie Settles is the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Short. Dr. A. E. Ewers and daughter, Gladden, returned Saturday from Lake Winona, Ind., where they have been spending their vacation.

Mrs. E. T. England and children, Nellie and Boy, of Barbourville, who have been for several days the guests of their aunt, Mrs. Willis Adams, left Thursday for Paint Lick to visit Mrs. England's mother, Mrs. Jack Adams. W. F. C. Champ was here from Paint Lick Sunday to see a Mt. Vernon belle. Ed Short was at home Saturday and Sunday. This is the first time Ed has been at home since he accepted the position with Mr. Creech, at East Bernstadt and his many friends were heartily glad to see him. Mrs. C. C. Williams and daughter, Rise, returned Monday from Mallory Springs.

Dr. P. W. Logan offers his splendid farm of 156 acres for sale in another column. He has sold nearly $4,000 worth of stock, cattle, feed, &c., off of it this year and has lots left.

WE were in error concerning the sale of Isaac Hamilton's bank stock. It will be sold here at 10:30 A. M., Sept. 10, court day.
YOU might spend a few hours pleasantly at the Hustonville colored fair this week. The cake walk will be worth your time to see.

It would be a good idea to have the creek flooded occasionally. The odor from it at its present stagnant condition is not conducive to either health or happiness.
THE sale of the valuable real estate belonging to the late Squire J. S. Murphy comes off at public auction in front of the court-house tomorrow afternoon. See ad.

THE Earnest Workers' society of the Presbyterian church will have a "Sack Social" at the home of Mr. W. B. McRoberts Thursday evening next. If you get a little sack, fill it with money and take it to the social.
A CINCINNATI man committed suicide because the carrier quit delivering his paper. We have been very apprehensive about some of our readers on account of mail irregularities, and extra precautions will be taken hereafter.

HELD.—John Dixon, who was arrested at Crab Orchard, charged with stealing a valise belonging to Prof. C. C. Monroe, the institute conductor, waived his examining trial and was held over to circuit court in $300, which he failed to give.

THE reception given by the Mission Band at the Christian church Friday evening was a most pleasing affair. Besides music by Misses Etta Belle Cloyd, Maude Varoon, Josephine Hayden, Alice Huffman, the wonderful Norfolk children, of Kearney, Mo., and others, candy and cakes were served, all for the small sum of 10 cents. The receipts were $22.80, which go toward building a home for the orphan children of India.

THE catalogues of the Liberty fair, which begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th, and continues three days, are in press at this office and will be out in a few days. There is a ring for almost everything and the premiums are as usual liberal. There will be running, trotting and pacing races each day and good purses are offered. The officers are: F. P. Combust, president; James C. Coulter, vice president, and A. P. Young, secretary and treasurer. With such men as officers the fair can not be otherwise than a success. The directors and vice presidents are substantial citizens from a half dozen counties. If you want to have fun and lots of it make your arrangements to attend the Liberty fair.

KILLED INSTANTLY.—Lightning struck the house of John B. Anderson, in the Preachersville section at 1:30 Sunday afternoon and the shock instantly killed his wife, who was standing on the porch. Mr. Anderson was lying on a bed close to where a hole was torn in the wall and was also considerably shocked. With the exception of her eye brows and lashes being singed, there were no marks on Mrs. Anderson's body when the broken-hearted husband reached her side. The chimney was torn down and the house was considerably damaged. Besides Mr. Anderson, four children, the youngest of which is only four months, are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and indulgent mother. The remains were laid to rest in the Goshen burying ground yesterday morning but the funeral will not be preached until next Sunday, when Eld. J. G. Livingston will do so at Goshen church. Mrs. Anderson was Miss Annie Johnson and a better christian woman would have been hard to find. Great sympathy is felt for the husband and children in the loss they have sustained.

THEIR many friends deeply sympathize with Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Morris in the loss of their little six months old child.
FARMERS.—Return our wheat sacks at once or call and pay for them. We need them to receive wheat. This means you. J. H. Baughman & Co.
NEW STORE.—J. Gold has rented the little room on Lancaster street in the Commercial Hotel building and opened out a stock of china ware, granite ware, &c. He will put in a lot of second hand clothing later.

DR. P. W. LOGAN and his entire family extend heartfelt thanks to the many friends who, in the hour of distress, rendered grateful aid during the recent illness of their dear son and brother, "Woodie."

A PRIVATE tip comes that Dr. John M. Williams, of Mt. Vernon, will be nominated for Congress at the convention to be held in Richmond, but we are still backing our entry, the Hon. Gray Gelding Davidson.

CARTER BROS.—Walter, George and Byron, have rented Mr. Isaac Hamilton's store-room at Rowland and will open a general stock of merchandise at once. They are clever young men and have lots of friends who wish them well.

DEATH.—Mr. W. L. McCarty, of Kingsville, who was here yesterday, told us of the death of Wm. Payne, a good citizen of his section. He died of fever and was buried in the Murphy burying ground Sunday afternoon. Mr. Payne was 25 years old and left a wife and one child.

YOUR attention is called to the announcement of Gus McCormack, who wants to serve his party as assessor. He made a splendid deputy under Assessor E. D. Kennedy and feels that with the experience he has had he could fill the office creditably. Mr. McCormack is a dyed-in-the-wool democrat, an excellent citizen and is well equipped for the office he aspires.

"THE strongest man will be nominated even if a Brown democrat has to be selected," said the Hon. Gray Gelding Davidson to a Courier Journal correspondent in Louisville the other day. He was talking through his hat about the republican's candidate for Congress in this district. "We will make my district the battle ground and expect to carry it with the aid of the Brown men," he continued, in his whistling effort to keep up his courage.

A SPLENDID SPEECH.—Attorney General R. J. Breckinridge spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience at the court house yesterday. His arraignment of the military and imperialist tendencies of the republicans was the finest thing that we have heard or read on the subject. He then took up the issues of the State campaign and discussed them thoroughly, and displayed a complete mastery of the subject. Instead of stealing the offices the democrats had discovered the thieves who stole them and recovered their property. He expounded the claim of the legality of causing mountaineers to swarm in on the capital, but even if legal, they had no right surely, to create a reign of terror and commit assassination. The democrats had followed the law, and the proper tribunal had decided in their favor, and all acts of the usurpers and those acting under them, after the decision, were traitorous. He showed up the loose business methods of the republicans while in office. At least two clerks have been permitted to default in large sums by the auditor's failing to require them to make monthly reports. While the law doesn't permit a cent to be paid into the hands of the adjutant general, who gives no bond, upwards of $10,000 had been turned over to Collier for certain uses and they have Daniel busy now straightening his accounts. The former superintendent of public instruction by holding back funds of one year to make a big show the next, has gotten things into a terrible muddle. These are only samples of many shortcomings. They are on a hot track after many others. He has nothing to say against Yerkes personally, but in endorsing all the actions of his party, he has shouldered a great load. Certain speakers at the republican convention had said the Indiana patriots could come home when Yerkes was elected. Do they speak authoritatively? If the office of governor is rightfully Taylor's why don't they try to get it back for him? Wouldn't it be as unjust to give it to Yerkes as Beckham? He is in favor of changing the Goebel law, because it needs changing. His description of the scenes attending the reign of terror, of which he was a personal witness, was as fine a specimen of oratory as we ever heard. The speech was liberally applauded from beginning to end and produced a fine effect.

J. L. JONES sold to A. B. Siler four lots in Rowland for $350.
G. L. PENNY has received the handsome cash register ever seen here.
A HALF-WAY fair offer on any Ladies' low cut shoes gets them. Jno. P. Jones.
THE L. & N. will sell round trip tickets to Cincinnati Sunday at $1.50.
THE L. & N. will sell round trip tickets to the Elks fair at Lexington this week at one fare.

WE sell Hanan's, Stacy Adams' and Helmsbottmann's shoes. To a shoe man this is conclusive evidence where to buy. John P. Jones.
News comes from Boyle that that sterling democrat, E. W. Lillard, will more than likely be the next representative from that county.

THE only thing done in the county court yesterday was the qualifying of Mrs. Maggie Webb as administratrix of her husband, Foster Webb.
JONES is opening up lots of new fall goods this week. A peep at the ladies' ties, handkerchiefs, dress goods, gloves, &c., evinces good taste and care.

LEN SHANNON writes us from Moreland that he was treated unfairly at the Danville fair. The blue tie was given to a 16-hand roadster in the photon pony ring over his fine entry which was less than 15 hands high.

It was reported here this morning that the wife and children of Thomas Alford, of Milledgeville, were badly hurt by the horse they were driving running away, but how serious the injuries are we are unable to learn.

CHURCH MATTERS.

Rev. A. M. Lambert writes from Williamsburg that he has just closed an interesting meeting at Earle's Chapel, which resulted in 15 additions and a general awakening of the church members.
Eldrs. J. G. Livingston and A. J. Daugherty are conducting an interesting meeting at Pine Grove, which has resulted so far in 15 additions. A church organization of 50 members was effected.

THE Rev. John A. Lee, of Covington, created something of a sensation at the Crittenden Baptist Association, in Grant county, by making a semi-political address, in which he made a sharp onslaught on Congressman Berry.

THIS AND THAT.

A. B. Florence sold to T. D. Raney a family mare for $25.
There are 59 cases of yellow fever in Havana, four of the victims being Americans.
J. B. Gentry's once good race mare, Aureole, has broken down and he has had her shipped home for a rest.
Hon. Albert A. Stoll announces that he will be a candidate for mayor of Louisville at the election in November, 1901.

A petition asking for the removal of Claude Chinn from the position of county clerk of Fayette, will be filed this week in the court of appeals.
Tom Pence sold to Craig Gooch 25 ewes at $1.25 and bought of J. C. Lynn some heifers at 3c. He bought of John C. Pepples 75 ewes at $3.75 and sold to him 100 ewes at $4.
W. L. Moore, administrator of Granville Neal, has sued the town of Jellison, Tenn., for $20,000. Neal was imprisoned for drunkenness there and he was burned to death when the jail was burned.

GUS MCCORMACK

Is a candidate for Assessor of Lincoln county, subject to the action of the democratic party.
